

We are planning a walking city tour of Old Montreal. (I realize it is December and may be cold at night, but it is a beautifully lit city and they have their Christmas markets open). Tours will start at 6:30pm and last about 1 hour and 30 minutes. (The Meeting ends at 5:10 on Friday) and the starting point is a short 15 min walk or a quick uber/taxi ride away. Meet at Place d'Armes, near the monument dedicated to Maisonneuve.

The Tour Company is Guidatour.

Here is an example of a typical tour:

- Walk to many important public squares such as Place d'Armes, Place Royale, and Place Jacques-Cartier and see the monuments and works of art that are on display there.
- Admire the external architecture of a variety of impressive buildings: the three courthouses, the Château Ramezay and the Bonsecours Market.
- Venture into other historic buildings such as the famous Notre-Dame Basilica, if you desire ($).
- Pass by the Notre-Dame-de-Bon-Secours Chapel, City Hall as well as walk along the former "Wall Street" of Canada, St-Jacques Street.
- Just off the charming Saint-Paul Street, discover the foundation site of the city's first hospital, l'Hôtel Dieu, in the Cours Le Royer.
- No visit is complete without a picture of the Sulpician Seminary, the oldest building of the historic district.
